British Visitors in Vaudeville Act at Bar Harbor

Members of Embassy Entertain for Benefit of Hospital.

Special Despatch to THE NEW YORK HERALD. BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 13.—The chief event of the week was the vaudeville given for the Bar Harbor Hospital, the entertainment being furnished largely by the members of the British Embassy, who are summering here, and their guests.

As is the custom in connection with the hospital entertainments the nature of the programme was kept a secret except that it was known that the performers called their skit "The Young Visitors," after the book by Daisy Ashford. It was high class vaudeville, given by Capt. J. F. Harker, Mr. H. V. Tennant and Mr. Chilton, all of the embassy. Miss Tracey-Lyon of New York sang. Miss Beatrice Byrne of New York and Northeast Harbor, who recently returned from Paris, gave a solo dance. Miss Eleanor Williams was delightful in her singing. Mrs. E. J. Cave-Cole of New York was accompanist.

On next Wednesday and Thursday a gymnastic will be held at Morrell Park. The programme includes a number of stunts, a number of show classes, including hunters, jumpers, hunt teams and combination ponies, running races for thoroughbreds and polo ponies and a number of novelty events.

A concert was given at the Building of Arts on Tuesday by the Salzedo Harp Ensemble and Miss Suzanne Dabney, soprano, of Boston. Mr. Salzedo is passing the season at Bar Harbor and introduced a number of his pupils. The chief interest of the local colony was the first professional appearance of Miss Dabney, who for many seasons has been a soloist at the Newport. She has often been heard in parlor music and her debut on Tuesday was very successful.

Lady Dean Paul was heard in a recital at the Building of Arts last Saturday with Mrs. Satoria, wife of the grandson of Gen. Grant, who read the Verlaine poems that Lady Paul, or Poldowski, as she is known in the musical world, interpreted on the piano. Earlier in the week Poldowski appeared at a musicale given at Sonogee by Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt.

The British cruiser Cambrian left this week after a stay of several days at the resort, during which Capt. James D. Stewart and the other officers of the ship were frequently entertained. The most elaborate event being a dinner given at the Pot and Kettle.

Many of the colonists motored Wednesday to Northeast Harbor, where they attended the dog show, and by members of the Northeast colony.

On Thursday a sale for the benefit of the disabled veterans of the Polio Clinic Hospital, New York, was held at Parvins, the summer home of Mrs. J. P. Philip Livingston of New York.

Deauville Crowded With Tourists From America

Surprise French by Asking for Water to Drink, Which Is as Hard to Get as Champagne in United States.

Special Correspondence to THE NEW YORK HERALD.

DEAUVILLE, July 28.

By MAY BIRKHEAD.

PARISIANS who have thought they could avoid the heat and likewise the tourists by coming to Deauville have been greatly disappointed. Americans, on the other hand, who have thought they were coming to the most popular French seaside resort to be among the French and avoid their fellow countrymen have been equally disappointed. So it might seem that Deauville is disappointing this season in every particular.

This little corner of Normandy has gained the reputation during its short existence of nine years of being the most cosmopolitan seaside resort in the world. When it is taken into consideration that Deauville was built in 1912 and was enjoying its first big season when war was declared in 1914, the previous summer having been devoted to putting the finishing touches to the building of the hotels and the inauguration of things in general, it is rather remarkable that it should have gained this cosmopolitan reputation in so short a time.

It must be acknowledged, however, that too much credit can not be given to Deauville for springing up overnight, for it had its sister village, Trouville, which had been the most fashionable of the French resorts on the Channel for a century, within a stone's throw, and Trouvilleans are annoyed at the thought of Deauville having "gained" the reputation of being the smart summer resort. "Gained" is scarcely the word, as it was nothing more or less than robbery, according to the Trouvillean neighbors. But whether on "Plage Fleurie," as Deauville is called by the French, gained or stole her reputation for being the most cosmopolitan seaside resort on the Continent makes little difference, for she stands in a fair way of losing it this season, and it is the Americans who are held responsible.

Throngs of Americans.

Deauville for the moment is nothing more nor less than American. There have probably never been so many Americans in this Calvados resort at any one time as during this last week end. They have come in swarms from every direction. There are not more than a half dozen French names appearing on the hotel registers. The gambling rooms in the Casino which are rarely opened before August 1 have been filled to overflowing for the last two weeks and one hears nothing but English spoken on all sides. Of course they are largely weekend visitors, even in the middle of the week there have been as many as ten baccarat tables playing and the Americans have been standing three deep at the tables where 50 cents is the minimum, which is rather unusual. At least it has been out of the ordinary in previous years for the Americans have not gone so heavily for the game as the French and are usually to be found at the tables that play a smaller game. But with all this Deauville in July and Deauville in August will probably prove two very different propositions, as the races which are usually so popular here will doubt draw the old cosmopolitan set.

There is much speculation on this point, however, for it has not been forgotten that the French press scored Deauville for its excessive gambling last year, and also for being so outrageously expensive. The visitors who have always raved over the beauties of Deauville, its exquisite villas, beautiful beach, splendid sporting club and picturesque surrounding country, left last year with a bad taste in their mouths. They had the feeling that it had all become too commercial. The smart aspect of the place was more or less forced. The chic Parisianes who were driving about in the most magnificent automobiles usually proved to be dressmakers and modistes. As far as the Americans were concerned they were principally shoppers and manufacturers of women's apparel who had come to study Deauville and her race course from the point of view of gaining ideas from the French fashions.

Gambling at Casino.

The most fashionable Parisians lived in their villas and remained apart from the life at the Casino, and if they did appear at the races they were lost in the sea of commercial visitors. Gambling at the Casino ceased to be a pleasure. It grew to be a business. It was talked all over France, and far beyond, that a prominent Cuban merchant had won a million francs on one turn of the card at the baccarat table, and the servants were dissatisfied that he did not tip more liberally with his winnings. A heavy guard was kept constantly around the gambling rooms for the writers, seeing huge fortunes changing hands over the table within hearing distance of the devastated regions where there was so much want and suffering, were threatening every minute to strike, and there was apprehension in the air and a feeling that all was not going well. The beautiful and the demi-monde were there side by side and the display of elegance was absolutely staggering. Women went to the place in the morning wearing strings of pearls and diamond necklaces. A sable coat meant nothing more than a rotton rag, and of course the price of living in such surroundings was unbelievable. The tourists who went to the battlefields for one week end and on to Deauville for the next found the contrast so striking that they left with a feeling that something terrible was about to happen. As the French press was not sparing in its criticism the word has gone the rounds that Deauville will not be smart in August. The probabilities are, however, that it will continue to be very American.

The strange part of this American influx, as seen by the French, is that they are calling for water to drink and are having as difficult a time in obtaining it as they have in finding champagne in America. Such is the contrary disposition of human nature. The "sommeliers" in the Deauville restaurants look with disgust on the American who insists upon his bottle of Evian, and are beginning to think that so much talk about the Americans being unable to live under the heavy yoke of prohibition is bordering on insincerity. At all events the sommelier wears a grim countenance and begs the maître d'hôtel to add an extra tax to the bill while the champagne remains in the cellar. And so it might be said that the high cost of food in Deauville (at least in some instances) is governed by prohibition in America.

High Price for Villas.

Despite the fact that the hotels are filled to overflowing, there are still many villas to be rented. The high prices are held accountable for the closed shutters. In June the prices asked for the villas were twice as high as last season, but the agents have begun to see that the villas would remain vacant throughout the season at such prices, so the same villas have been offered within the last two weeks at half their original figures and the possibilities are that the late comers can have a villa at a most reasonable price.

A number of Americans have been here since July 1, Mr. and Mrs. William Horton among them. Mr. Horton is a landscape painter and has been doing good work on the beach. Mr. and Mrs. James Donahue have been motoring to both the mountain and seaside resorts for the last six weeks and have returned after passing a week here in June, saying that they preferred Deauville to all of the seaside resorts that they had visited and expect to remain for the August season. Mr. Reginald C. Vanderbilt was here for the last week end but motored on up the coast with the expectation of returning for another week end before sailing for America in August. Several Americans have taken the air route from Paris to Deauville. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Lewisohn flew from Paris last week. Mr. Herbert Pulitzer also came by air. Mr. James Deering is another prominent American who has just arrived.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Kahn have taken a villa at Honneville, a suburb of Deauville, and have their daughter, Mrs. Marriott, who resides in London, with them for the season. They passed the first two weeks in July in Evian-les-Bains.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd C. Furrow and Miss Florence Furrow are here for a fortnight before proceeding to Italy to complete their tour of Europe. Mr. Furrow is the president of the Otis Elevator Company of New York and Paris and has been reorganizing his office in Paris, so has been able to pass only his week ends with his family on the coast.

Miss Alice Silverthorne, a niece of Mr. Philip D. Armour of Chicago, motored through Deauville a few days ago with her French fiancé, Vicomte de Janze, who lives in Dinard. They were motoring from Dinard to Dieppe to visit the mother of the Vicomte de Janze, before the formal announcement was made of their engagement.

The Duchess de Talleyrand (who was Miss Anna Gould) motored from Paris every week end to join her children, who are here for the summer. As the Duke does not like Deauville she returns to Paris every Monday to be with him during the week at their chateau near Paris.

Mr. Thomas Hitchcock, Jr., the polo player, is another prominent American who has been here for a week end. He was on his way from England to Spain to be the guest of the King of Spain, as they are great polo friends.

Others at the Resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Barrington White have been here for the last week and are going on up the coast to Eretet, to visit her mother, Mrs. Kingland. Mrs. Bruce Brown has been here for a week and will probably return later. Mr. and Mrs. Clarence W. Dolan and their daughter, Miss Rose E. Dolan, are here. The latter is staying with her grandmother, Mrs. Nelson Brown, who has a villa. Mrs. Lindsay Fairfax and her daughter, Miss Grace L., have been here during July and are sailing next week for New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker and her sister, Miss Euphemia Cruger, have been passing their week ends here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Codman have taken a villa and have Lady Gurnsey as their guest for the season. Mrs. S. Van Rensselaer Thayer has a villa and expects to do much entertaining next week for Vice-Admiral and Mrs. Albert P. Niblack and the other American navy officers who are now at Havre. Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Eddy and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Sprackels, have taken a villa and expect to be here all season.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Harjes have their usual villa and are preparing to do much entertaining in August.

Mrs. Lawrence G. Boggs is visiting her relative, Contesse des Montiers-Meriville (Miss Stevens), Contesse des Montiers-Meriville, who also was a Miss Stevens, and her son and daughter are in the same party.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry La Montagne, Mr. and Mrs. Rosh W. Cuneo and Mr. and Mrs. John Ridgely Carter are among other Americans who have villas either in or near Deauville.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Kingsley Macomber have taken a villa for August. Mrs. Macomber arrived and he will be here for the opening of the racing season.

Mrs. Anna Bowman Dodd has opened her country place, Le Manoir de la Vallée, on the road from Deauville to Honfleur, and is having guests for each week end. She is organizing a charity fete in Deauville for the benefit of the Russians.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Dougherty of New York motored from Dinard last week and will remain a few days before returning to Paris. Mrs. John A. Black has been motoring here for the week ends.

Mr. Richard B. Mellon of Pittsburgh, brother of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mrs. Mellon motored from Paris last week and expect to be here for the season. Miss Virginia Jacobs of Baltimore is seen at the Casino every night. Other Americans who have been here recently are Princess Pignatelli, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Cosgrove, Mr. and Mrs. William Duke, Mr. Louis A. Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. George Bakht meteff, Prince Vladimir Engelstcheff, Mr. A. Percy Goff, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wheeler of Chicago; Mr. Carroll Carstairs and Mr. and Mrs. William Attkin.
